PRICE TWO CENTS

Sports Front

By Don Diplock

To take a quick glance at the results and standings of the varsity basketball team doesn't give anyone an added feeling of pride for the big team. No one would call a losing streak of three games exactly brilliant; and no one would call one third of the attempted free shots tried and completed any better; not, that is, unless his knowledge of basketball is slightly limited. This however should not be taken as a necessary criterion of the type of basketball played by the home team. As a matter of fact the M.B.L. presents the best class of basketball to be found in the city. The fact that the shooting eyes of the McGill boys have been slightly off lately doesn't prove very much except that they haven't been able to overcome. Steady practice is going to find them back near the top soon, defensive and pass-work remaining at the same high standard.

As the schedule moves on the team seems to be finding its condition a little better. They have found it hard to last out at full speed; will show new stamina from now on. Coach Van Wagner finds Med students with exams hard men to get for all the practices he wants them for; will drive the rest to turn out more accurate shooting.

Saturday night will show what results are being accomplished, how far McGill can go on her way to a play-off berth. Now ten points behind the leaders and with five games to go her chances for overtaking the Oilers aren't any too bright; may result in a spot in the top three and a crack at the city championship.

A golden anniversary in the world of sport finds colleges all over the continent celebrating the fiftieth year of basketball next month. The celebration will mean more to McGill than any other college since the famous founder, Dr. Naismith, is a graduate of the local law school. The athletic doctor, a native of Almonte, Ontario, spent a while directing the athletic efforts of the McGill men after his graduation. Moving on to Springfield he followed a similar course, started a new game, called it basketball.

Since his time, his athletic baby has developed into a fifty-year-old American favourite, growing stronger every year, becoming more and more popular throughout the world, and drawing crowds comparable to the largest of athletic gatherings.

The doctor will lead the way through the portals of a basketball hall of fame along with many other stand-out exponents in the U.S. and Canada. Due to financial difficulties between Canada and the States our contribution to the Hall of Fame cannot come until the war is over. But plans are under way to hold an all-star game at McGill, the proceeds going to buy War Savings Certificates. Killing two more birds with one stone, the college can help the war effort, help build the Hall of Fame and provide an outstanding game of basketball for all enthusiastic followers of the game.

Arts Undergraduate Society Meets to Discuss Plans

Ski-house, Banquet, Dance, Beer Party Will Be on Agenda

The Arts and Science Undergraduate Society will hold a general meeting tomorrow afternoon at five o'clock in the Common Room of the Arts Building. The meeting is being called for the express purpose of discussing some of the future activities of the Society. The Executive will also announce at the meeting the complete plans about the St. Adele Ski-house undertaking.

Recently the Executive has assumed some of the financial responsibility of a Ski-house at St. Adele. The house will be open for the general use of the members of the Society. In the planning of this undertaking it was the intention of the executive to offer its members a more varied choice of activities and to afford them an opportunity of better acquainting themselves with each other.

At the meeting reports will be made concerning a dance, the Annual Arts Dinner, and the proposed visit to a local brewery.

It is expected that the dance will be held sometime towards the end of February. The event will be informal in nature but, following the usual custom of the Arts Informal Hops, will emphasize some special feature. The feature of this dance has not yet been decided and it is hoped that some of the members will come equipped with some original ideas.

The annual dinner is going to be (Continued on Page Four)

Medieval English Child Discussed

Historical Club Meeting Hears Stuart Address

The Men's Historical Club held a meeting at Professor Adair's house, 3578 University street, last night. The life of the Medieval child in England was discussed in a paper given by G. K. Stuart. The speaker began his talk by giving a general idea of the aims to be attained in the education of the Medieval child, with a description of the conditions under which that education was to be obtained.

Education in the Middle Ages was restricted principally to a church career or to other theological subjects. These studies were all carried on in Latin, and it is to be remarked that, as a result a thorough knowledge of the English language was almost unknown. The nobility and the other landed gentry did not look favourably on too much education for the serfs, particularly after the Black Death, owing to the fact that this was liable to diminish the already scarce quantity of available labour. An education with an eye to entering the ranks of the church was the customary means by which a serf could raise his social standing. The speaker then gave a picture of the life led by the average pupil in the monastic schools. They, "poor beggars," had to rise at 6 a.m. and did not get their breakfast until 9 a.m., after ceremoniously chanting the "De Profundis." Castigation was liberally administered, and this was particularly popular during the Renaissance period. The only permissible medium of expression was the Latin language, and it is even possible that students of that day knew more of this language than does the average student of to-day.

The speech ended with an analysis of the education imparted to the ladies of the day. Co-education was frowned upon, so that their schooling consisted of what they could be taught at home.

Prohibition in War Urged

Freshmen to Debate with Second Year

The second semi-final in the present series of Arts undergraduate debates is to be held in the Arts Building at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The subject under discussion is "Be It Resolved that Prohibition should be introduced in Large Troop Centres, such as Halifax, for the Duration of the War." The topic will be proposed by the speakers for First Year, J. Kennedy and E. P. Newcombe, whilst the negative side is to be upheld on behalf of Second Year by S. D. Bross and W. J. Mahabir.

The winners of this debate will oppose the Fourth Year team, G. K. Greaves and M. G. Smith, who on Wednesday succeeded in vanquishing Third Year, represented by V. Dawe and L. Horlick, on the question as to whether workers in Public Utilities should have the right to strike. This final contest is to take place next week, although the exact date has not yet been determined. The conditions under which all these events will be held are the same in that each speaker is to be allowed seven minutes in which to present his arguments, with the first debater being permitted three minutes at the end to rebut his opponents' points.

Coeds Slaughtered Chivalry At Unattached Damsels' Ball

By R. R. M.

It was most amusing, at the Spinners' Spree last night, to watch the female species trying to undertake the duties and obligations of the male, especially the complexity of politeness which any dance must call forth. And in their complete failure to maintain even a sub-standard, they betrayed their utter lack of customary attention to the chivalry whose dying they constantly deplore.

It has been said that no one is so polished in table manners as a waiter, since he, above all others, is afforded the opportunity of observing what ought to be done in eating, and, more especially, what ought not to be done. For exactly the same reason, any girl should know just how an escort should behave.

Pre-Medical Society Hears Dr. Scriver

Early Doctors' Training, Life Topic of Talk

Dr. Jessie Boyd Scriver, a specialist in pediatrics and a graduate of McGill, addressed the Pre-Medical Society yesterday on "Some Aspects of the Early Training of a Physician."

To illustrate her talk, Dr. Scriver selected a few passages from the works of several famous doctors. Among these books was one by Sir William Osler, entitled, "Equinimitas," and another by Ambrose Pare, one of the greatest French surgeons. Quoting from Sir William Osler's "Equinimitas," Dr. Scriver said, "Any person or any doctor should have a good book to read before going to sleep and when he gets up in the morning. Included in the list of books to be read on these occasions are the Old and the New Testament, and the works of William Shakespeare."

Dr. Scriver's address was a description of what a perfect doctor should do, and how he should act. She said, "Doctors should learn to seclude themselves from certain pieces when necessary, and learn to make the most of their time. They should have a time-table to work by, and they would profit tremendously by reading general literature. They should think of their patients, they should search for the truth."

At the end of the address, Joan Atkin thanked the speaker on behalf of the club.

The novel idea which was to be presented at this meeting was postponed, the reason being that the President of the Society was not (Continued on Page Four)

Strathcona Hall Revamped Into Teachers Home

Newest Female Additions Will Arrive Next Week

by M.R.

Dust and the smell of fresh paint greeted us as we entered into what was once the centre of much student activity. Strathcona Hall is being redecorated from stem to stern, now that the men student residents have all been ousted. Fortunately, however, the men will soon be replaced by women residents.

The males of the college will be ogling new female faces around the campus in the near future. Approximately seventy girls from the School of Teachers at Macdonald College soon will take up residence (Continued on Page Four)

S.C.M. to Hold Service Sunday

Missionary to Manchuria Will Address Group

The S.C.M. at McGill, continuing its policy of holding regular religious services of different denominations, has arranged a service to be held in Divinity Hall at 7.30 p.m. this coming Sunday evening. To conduct the event is Rev. E. H. Johnson, a missionary who returned from Manchuria a year ago, where he had travelled in 1935 to carry on religious work on behalf of the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Johnson graduated from McGill in 1930, having been a Gold Medalist in Mathematics and Physics, and did post-graduate work in Scotland and Germany, studying especially the theological aspect of scientific discovery. He now returns to McGill to conduct and address a service in the chapel of his own denomination under the auspices of the S.C.M.

This meeting is to be followed, according to the usual custom and tradition of the S.C.M., by an open house and discussion which is scheduled to take place in the new meeting-house at 3574 University Street; this abode has been adopted by the movement since Strathcona Hall has been taken over for other purposes, and it is hoped by the executive that the change in residence will necessitate no vital alteration in plans.

'Frying Pan' Characters Destined to Come to Life On February 19, 20, 21

Bunny Burke

Who plays the part of Marge in the new Players' production of "Out of the Frying Pan," which has just been announced for February 19, 20, 21.

Seating Arrangements And Prices Unaltered From Former Years

Dates for the McGill Players' Club production of "Out of the Frying Pan" have now definitely been set for the 19th, 20th, and 21st of February, with ticket prices unchanged from last year at 40 cents for students and 75 cents for the general public.

Stan Eidinger, Pam Holt, John Averill, Jackie Dorsey, Roy Wolvin, Bunny Burke, and Ronnie Bayne play parts characterized by Robert Benchley, Florence MacMichael, William Holden, Mabel Paige, Eddie Bracken, Barbara Britton, and Jim Brown in the motion picture soon to be released by Paramount.

In the foreword to the printed play, playwright Francis Swann declares that "the characters and events in this play are purely imaginary and anyone claiming resemblance or similarity ought to be ashamed to admit it. He confesses, however, that his sister, Lynn Swann, and her experiences as a Broadway actress, provided the basic idea for a story dealing with the trials and tribulations of a group of young thespians trying to get a break in New York and sharing a Greenwich Village apartment."

Under the leadership of club president Murdoch Harvie, the following committees will assist in the production:

Construction, Barbara Ferguson; Properties, Joan Coulter; Stage and Crew, Bob McGoun; Publicity, Dave Armstrong; Tickets, Bob Watt; Program, Stirling Rutledge.

Posters are being designed by students in the Architects Undergraduate Society, under the leadership of Lewis and Cripps.

The McGill architects' artistry will be on display in the prominent department stores of the city. Complimentary tickets will be awarded to the three artists submitting the best posters. This year two picture-posters with photographs of the entire cast will be on view in the Arts and Engineering Building.

Last year students wishing to attend in groups of 12 or more were given the option of reserving seats in Moyses Hall. The same arrangements may be made this year. Only a part of the hall, however, will be reserved, and the rule will be first come, first served. Should the number of tickets sold warrant it, it might be possible to stage one or more repeat performances.

Eleven hundred attended the highly successful "Good Morning, Bill" last season, and the expectations are that attendance figures will be even higher this year.

Proceeds from all performances go to the Students' Society of McGill University to swell the general fund from which the Society has in the past invested in War Bonds. Thus the Players Club is indirectly doing its part for the war effort, as well as providing entertainment for the students, and by the students.

Through the years the Players Club has established for itself an enviable reputation among amateur theatrical groups, and many of its past members are now prominently associated with the stage and radio, one of the principal among them being Barbara Whitley, whose monologues may be heard weekly over a local radio station. Leonard Griffith, who was one of the stars of last year's production is another who has had considerable radio experience.

The Diagnosis

We reprinted yesterday an editorial that appeared in the December issue of the McGill Medical Journal, the publication of the Medical Undergraduate Society, and suggested to the readers that they diagnose the case. Below, we suggest a diagnosis that we should advance.

We should mention first that the writer flagrantly accuses the Students' Executive Council dictating, rather than representing the opinions of McGill Students. Does he forget that the medical students are represented in the Council by a man of their own choice, elected by themselves to represent them? Does he forget too, that in the first pages of his magazine he states clearly that the opinions expressed are those of the managing board of the Journal? And yet he writes: "Medical students... wish only to remind the Students' Council" etc., etc., speaking for medical students in general.

He criticizes the Council for its decision to substitute war work for the more expensive and less materially productive activities of the campus, forgetting, probably that the medical representative to the Council was heartily in favor. Or perhaps he forgot to ask the representative what stand he took in the matter. Another thing that he forgets is the actual resolution, in the question of those activities that should be dispensed with. Actually, these were "purely social" activities and not, as the editorial writer states, "student activities" in general. Perhaps he forgot to refer to the actual resolution for his information?

He makes a further statement regarding the attitude that a university should take. He says "it should continue that peaceful progress for which alone a war is worth fighting," and disagrees with some unfounded idea of his in which he believes that the students taking part in war activities consider it the role of the university to "undergo a violent and extremely artificial transformation in wartime." One would wonder just how artificial is the transformation which is taking place in our laboratories where work of a most important and genuine nature is being carried on. Perhaps he forgot about that.

He forgets, too, that he recommends the continuation of a "peaceful progress," since in order to maintain this condition some sizeable proportion of the students must remain at the university, and doing this, is it illogical that they should wish to donate their spare time to the furthering of our war effort? And yet he accuses these students of "trivial patriotism," carrying out a tireless campaign to help the country in order only to seek publicity and impress the public of their honorable intentions. Perhaps the writer forgot to help them in their efforts, or perhaps he didn't want to. In any case, it appears that there are a great many things that he forgot, which leads us to our diagnosis.

DIAGNOSIS: Amnesia.

Short-Recess

The holiday that used to come around the end of February or the beginning of March for the last five years, and known as the long week-end, the short recess, or the spring break, came up for discussion at the last meeting of the Students' Council.

Since the unexplained disappearance of the short recess had caused some confusion among students who were accustomed to using this release from lectures as a period in which to relax before exams, or in which to catch up in past work in preparation for future exams, the Council decided to investigate.

Briefly, we present the past history of the short recess. The idea was first instituted in 1936, by the university Senate, and came into effect in 1937. It corresponded with similar periods in many universities in the United States. Some discussion took place last year on the question of abolishing this holiday, but no action was taken until this year. The long week-end has now been abolished by the Senate upon recommendation of the Senate committee which is in charge of arranging the university calendar.

Some reasons were advanced for the abolishment. In the first place, it was felt that this holiday conflicted too much with Easter week, causing much lost time from lectures. It was also felt that in wartime, outside of other considerations, neither the university nor the students could afford to take that time off, when a number of holidays were given in the fall term.

It is, of course, definitely settled that there will be no short recess this year. Whether there will or will not be one next year depends upon the opinion and decision of the Senate, with, we hope, some consideration of the opinion of the student body.

Art Exhibit

The Art Association of Montreal is sponsoring a loan exhibition of masterpieces of paintings from next Thursday to March 8th, which will be the finest of its kind ever to be shown in Canada. This exhibition, for the benefit of the men of the allied merchant navies, will be opened by His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, and H.R.H. Princess Alice.

Over one hundred and twenty-five pictures, hung on the Art Gallery walls, will illustrate the history of painting in Europe for the last five hundred years. Italian painting will begin in the fifteenth century with works by Mantegna and da Massina, among the first painters in oil colors. The art of Venice in the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries is especially well represented. There will be pictures by Titian, Veronese, Tintoretto, Canaletto, Guardi, and Longhi who illustrated the golden age of the Venetian era.

The Flemish painters will include a Rubens and a Jordaens. These were sent from Belgium for exhibition at the World's Fair in New York, and, on the outbreak of war, placed in the vaults of the Worcester Museum for safe-keeping. The Belgian Government, after lengthy negotiations, agreed generously to release these pictures especially for the Montreal Exhibition. The same generosity and co-operation has been found with representatives of the Dutch Government who are allowing twelve of their most treasured paintings to be taken from the vaults in the United States where they have been placed for safety and sent up to Montreal. These will include six pictures, the property of the Ryksmuseum in Amsterdam, which were shown at the World's Fair. These, which include Vermeer's "Milkmaid," had been placed in the guardianship of the Detroit Institute of Art. The Committee of the Loan Exhibition feels that any exhibition which lists a Vermeer becomes, if for no other reason, one of the great artistic events of any city.

Spain is to be represented by works of El Greco, the master who, though trained in the Venetian school of painting, developed a Spanish expression, and gave to Spain its first national art; by Velasquez, who became one of the world's greatest analytical portrait painters; by Ribera who painted with a robustness, almost modern in character; and by Goya, the last great painter of the Spanish School who died in the early nineteenth century.

The English painters begin with Isaac Oliver, famous for his miniatures and for his very few oil paintings. Then, after Hogarth, whose delightful family groups will be shown, come the great portrait painters, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney, Lawrence, and two of the greatest of landscape painters, Turner and Constable.

French art is remarkably well represented. Starting with Poussin and Claude Lorraine in the seventeenth century, it includes many painters in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, coming down to men as recent as Cezanne, Renoir, Gauguin and Picasso.

Special rates are being made for groups of students, and guide lectures may be arranged.

The Rake's Progress by mulligan

The Owl and The Red Martlet
A Saga of Dreadful Intrigue.

The Owl wearily dropped his pedal extremities down the stairs of Dogless Howl creeping like a small unwilling to Economics 99, at 9 o'clock he had mistakenly let himself in for. As he passed the fan-mail box in the hallway he noticed a letter for himself.

"How surprising," mused the Owl to his room-mate, the Bat "A letter! I can't imagine who it's from."

"A bill from the beer people, old fellow," consoled the Bat. "Tear it up."

The Owl surveyed the epistle with mingled apprehension. At last he ripped it open, driven more by curiosity than by judgment, and perused the contents in the same manner (as most do).

"How silly," he muttered to the Bat, casually stretching his ear and waving the letter aloft. "I have been mistaken for a Communist. Somebody must have seen my credit rating at the bank!"

"Or heard you shooting off your opinions of Lt.—in the M.R.T.B."

The Owl pretended not to hear. "Say," he expostulated, "this is rich. This is not only rich, it is good. Read this!" thrusting the pamphlet into the Bat's hand. "Let's go back to my room, I've still got some Caribou left; and besides I couldn't stomach any Economics 99 this morning."

Having thus satisfied their consciences, the clinking of glasses in H. house foretold the return of the rogues. "Yes, agreed the Owl, after most of the flagon of Caribou had been imbibed. "I sure agree with everything this here Red Martlet says."

"Very patriotic (hic)," agreed the Bat, impressed also. At that, the pair cracked a forty-ouncer (not without fearful eye) and prepared for a deep discussion on the terrible condition of world politics and the merits of Communism. The sun rose high in the sky and started on the downbeat; but from the house there still came a low buzz of conversation, accompanied by a loud guzzling sound.

"Ah, yes!" said the Owl, as the two drank the rest of their supper. "My mind is made up! Who flunked me in French 20 last year; who is going to flunk me in Economics 99 this year? Capitalists!" (The Owl was seized by a fit of violent hacking as a gulp of Elephant Tonic went down the wrong way.)

"Why wash I shtood up during Sadie Hawkins week? mumbled the Bat from somewhere under the bed. "Because 'j'capitalists had all the money, thash why."

"Thash no lie," agreed the Owl, vacantly staring at the ceiling and wondering how he was going to get back down again. A score of little red martlets were busy chasing all over the room. "Whooooo," he groaned.

"Pardon me," interrupted the Bat's head, protruding out from between the bedsprings. "But do you see a big red schickel all ready to cut my head off—and yours too—Duck! Go 'way, you!" (The head ducked back, turtle-fashion, to reappear terror-stricken a moment later.) "Shee?"

"Ouch," said the Owl. "I do seem to hear a hammer somewhere. Shay, Bat, lesh join 'j'Young Communists' League (hic). Thish calls for a celebrashun!" A bottle of Dead Men's Delight, unearthed from beneath a pile of dirty shirts, was broached with gusto. The two rogues perked up considerably after the Delight had lined their respective tummies. By now they had reached that happy state, wherein one is so corned that one acts completely sober.

The Owl grasped the telephone determinedly, the Bat propping him up lest he fall over. "Outside line?" queried the operator. "No, you ain't line," quicklicked the Owl sagely. "Haw!"

A dim candle burned ominously atop an empty bottle of vodka. Dim shadows flickered around a fettered picture of Karl Marx, Lenin, Rasputin, and a few others on the wall, and in another corner hung the Russian Crown jewels and scalp of several noted pre-revolution capitalists. Over the table bent several shrouded figures clad in slouch hats and black caps, busy twiddling their moustaches and looking dangerous.

A little crowfooted figure emerged from under the carpet, totting a big bottle in which some evil potion gurgled mournfully. "Haaaaaah," chorused the group hungrily, "we must have our cupful of capitalist blood." Glasses clinked and little Crowfoot beamed benignly at the sound.

"Ugh!" chorused the group unhappily. Little Crowfoot's face fell.

"Comrade Allpure Woolski, thees concoction tastes foul—foul," growled a tall skinny figure tweeking little Crowfoot's ear till he squeaked. "That last capitalist must have had proletarian blood in his veins."

"Owooooo," wailed Serge in anguish. "I, I never analyzed it for that, brother (I mean Comrade), Ratsky. Only the albumen and sugar."

"Aha!" said Comrade Ratsky, unamused and convinced. "Let us call the meeting to order." Their heads bent lower around the candle's solitary glow. A rat squeaked over in a corner and nibbled somebody hungrily. An exclamation of pain rent the air and the rat was suddenly assassinated.

"Food," chorused the assembly. "Good," said the company. One of the figures departed to the kitchen with the moribund rodent.

The meeting came to order. After the standard hocus-pocus, a wild gleam appeared in Serge Allpurewoolski's eye.

"This Owl," he snarled, "has crossed our path too often."

"He is a capitalist," howled another. (The Owl had flashed a borrowed five-dollar bill recently.)

Letter Forum

Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir: This is an open letter to those in charge of the McGill blood-bank campaign.

"Way back in the fall—remember?—we had a blood-bank campaign. Cute little red buttons were handed out to volunteer blood donors. We had a nice little story in the Daily about the first McGill students offering their blood. We even had a pretty picture printed about it."

So far nothing else seems to have happened! Not one registrant whom I know of has been contacted. Could it be the fault of the Red Cross blood-donor clinic? It doesn't look like it, since the press has been printing urgent appeals by them for more donors. There is room for scores more at the clinic. Meanwhile volunteer blood donors are waiting around, here in McGill.

Let's hear from those in charge about this.

Yours,
H.D.R. Science IV.

ICE FOLLIES

A star since her first year with Ice Follies, lovely Bess Ehrhardt is again to be one of the 28 featured performers in the latest edition of Shipstad and Johnson's colorful ice revue, the Ice Follies of 1942, at the Forum for 5 days starting tonight.

Infinite rehearsal and careful study of character were necessary for Miss Ehrhardt to create "Conchita" featured in the Mexican Fiesta sequence of the latest edition of the Follies.

The lovely skating star has won widespread acclaim for her previous "character" roles but this season she is credited with being greater than ever by those who have already seen the revue. The graceful Minnesota star will be seen in several of the numbers of Ice Follies this year and she shares top rating with Evelyn Chandler, Fran Claudet, Frick and Frack, Roy Shipstad, Ruby and Bobby Maxson, Heinle Brock, Phyllis and Harris Legg and the Thomas twins.

Two women were discussing a mutual acquaintance.

"She has a very magnetic personality," said one.

"She ought to have," commented the other, "everything she has on is charged."

"Exactly!" cried Comrade Allpurewoolski, jumping up so suddenly, he banged his head against the edge of the table. And I—he, he, he—I—ha, ha, ha—I—ho, ho, ho—I, Serge Allpurewoolski, will lead him to his doom."

Thought for Today

Today we turn for inspiration to Russian Folk music. In this vast and interesting field, there is source for many days' inspiration, but we must confine ourselves to one isolated phase of the subject. This is the irhythmic and atonality of the more primitive types of folk music.

Musicologists have recently discovered that the dirge, or, as they term it, the "prevjansk" is the most ancient of all musical forms. This is particularly true of Russian Folk music. In our field, the songs are characterized by lack of any accented beat save the very last, and this, of course, is an indication of its essentially irhythmic nature. Furthermore, the melodic theme—if such it may be called—invariably progresses by intervals of approximately one tone; to be exact the Russian "whole-tone" is 1/4 of ours. Since the melody never moves by intervals greater or smaller than a second, the music is clearly atonal.

These statements are not universally true of Russian Folk music. In the case of the "govnprjask" or marriage song, there are several authenticated instances of the first beat of the song being accented as well as the last, and of the melody jumping by intervals of a diminished fifth and even, in one very daring case, by a minor ninth. It is obvious that these considerations do not influence the rule that Russian music is irhythmic and atonal.

But what, the reader will ask, has this to do with our thought for today? Very simply we answer. Ethnological considerations indicate that the basic musical strain in human nature has progressed concomitantly with his intellectual and moral development, in precisely the ratio of his perception of the rhythmicity and tonality of the Universe in contrast to his own limitations. Here is our thought. Let us search our souls, realize the extent of the rhythm and tonality of our existence, and thereby appraise the degree of our intellectual advancement.

Meet in Second Game of Promising Double Header

Hope to End Slump in Tomorrow's Action

McGill rooters will have another chance of cheering a Red and White team to victory, when Holdredge and Co. tackle the high-flying Mount-Royals tomorrow night at the gym. This game will be the second one in to-morrow's double header of the Montreal Basketball League, as the Montreal Pats will play Westmount in the opener.

As usual, any student presenting his library card will be admitted free. Last week, several enthusiastic supporters of McGill took advantage of this opportunity, and constituted one of the largest crowds seen at one of these games this year.

TAILSPIN.
The Redmen have recently tall-spinned into a three-game losing streak since their promising opening win over Westmount, but they are by no means out of the picture. If they could only mold their team play on the same brilliant pattern they use when performing individual runs, the Redmen could certainly rapidly improve their position. One thing they are also lacking is undoubtedly scoring ability. When they throw the ball, it hovers all around the net, but never goes in seemingly.

More accurate shooting, a better synchronizing in the teams movements, and the McGillmen will very soon be in one of the first positions in the league. Mount Royal which they are opposing tomorrow night is now in second position, after beating the Oilers last Saturday and accounting for one of McGill's defeats on Monday. They might prove a tough nut to crack, but with the hearty determination of the Redmen, and corresponding support from us, the students, it can be done.

The wild winds weep, And the night is a cold Come hither, sleep, And my griefs unfold. But lo! the morning peeps Over the eastern steeps And the rustling beds of dawn The earth do scorn. —Sheaf.

Section M Defeat B-3 In Coed Basketball Tilt

On Thursday afternoon, the coed basketball loop saw Section M triumph over Section B-3. Strange as it seems, the losers were partly incidental in their opponents' triumph, and really deserve some thanks for the splendid sporting attitude they showed.

Here are the facts. Section M came to the floor one player short, and they were about to forfeit the game to their opponents, when the latter suggested that a player from their own team fill in the missing place. Section M, with this added support, managed to outclass Section B-3 and they netted 18 baskets to their opponents 9, thus gaining their first victory of the season, while B-3 was subjected to its first defeat.

Macdonald Wins Badminton Title

Intercompany Doubles Tournament to Be Played Next Week

The Aggies in another demonstration of their superior badminton skill edged out their opponents in the Inter-company badminton finals last Monday.

This game which brought to a close all activities in the "singles" section of the league saw Macdonald defeat C Company to the tune of 6 to 5. Before opposing the new champions, C Company had to take on the other semi-finalists, E Company. This last game was held the same afternoon, and C defeated E 7 to 5. Macdonald also eliminated G in a play off following a tie.

The Inter-company doubles tournament will be held Thursday, February 5th, at 7.15 p.m. Those who wish to take part will have to select a partner from their own company, and enter their names on the notice board at the gymnasium.

The winners of each match score 2 points, the losers score one point. The winners of the whole tournament score an extra 5 points and the second place team 3 points.

MIXED BADMINTON

All or a part of the gymnasium floor is available for mixed badminton 7.00 to 10.30 Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

White and Morris Spark Winners in 10-3 Triumph

Spirited Play in First Inter-house Hockey Tilt

Showing a smashing offensive drive and dashing goal keeping, the Diocesan College sextet routed the desperate Douglas Hallers to the tune of 10-3 yesterday in the first scheduled match of the Inter-House Hockey League. The fracas was played at the McTavish Street rink.

The game, while never in doubt, was close until the final period when the victors unleashed an unexpected scoring power which netted them five goals and left their opponents reeling at the finish. Up to this period the Diocesan held a commanding lead firing home two counters in the first period and three more in the second, while holding the Douglas Hall boys to two solitary markers in the middle frame.

WHITE IN FORM

Bill White was in superb form poking home six goals for the winners and his field day included a couple of assists as well. The other scorers for Diocesan were Morgan with two, and Noseworthy and Metcalfe one each. Gillon, Brown and Alguir tallied for the losers.

For the Diocesan, Morris was brilliant in the nets, as his teammates played wide open throughout and gave him no protection whatever on numerous occasions. Simmonds on the other hand had a tough night in the Douglas Hall goal and might have been beaten for several more goals only for the faulty shooting of the Diocesan. The game was comparatively clean and no penalties were called as each team stuck to straight hockey throughout. Bryson Smith pulled a couple of rough checks in the final frame but the referee failed to catch him.

The teams:
Douglas Hall: Simmonds, Brown, Poulson, D. Farlinger, F. Farlinger, Gillon, Alguir, Burrows, and Millholland.
Diocesan: Morris, Noseworthy, Morgan, White, Smith, Metcalfe, Standish and Pearson.

First Hoop Play-off Sees G-3 Trim F-2

Of the two games scheduled for to-night in the basketball eliminations, only one was played as Ind. 5 defaulted to A. 2, thus losing its chances to figure in the final line-up. G-3 also eliminated F-2 in the second game on the schedule, by the score of 18 to 9. As the low score evidently shows, both teams played a defensive game rather than risk their chances in disastrous attacks.

The next playoff in this league will take place this afternoon at 5.15, between E-4 and Ind.-4. Another match will be staged tomorrow at the same time, when the Aggies will meet E-3 in an effort to keep their team in the run for the championship.

Snowflakes

by J.B.

Having been blessed with good weather and a fine turnout on two occasions, the Outing Club is looking forward to a continuance of this happy combination this coming Sunday. A point which we might mention in connection with these tours is that the female element has increased beyond all expectations. From a lone one on the first trip, the number has increased to six, which by coincidence equalled the number of men. We have now struck a happy medium, which, being an engineer, I hope continues on forever.

The past trips have been carried out in comparative luxury. Those strong enough to venture forth on Sunday morning stepped at the hotels en route, thoroughly refreshing themselves at each one. However, this trip will be a short one into the wilds with the midday meal being served outside. Tea will be served by various artists who specialize in giving it that outdoor taste. The flavouring will consist of many varieties of skid-wax, pine-needles and anything else that happens to be available. The only things that you have to bring are sandwiches and a tin cup or substitute.

The Johannsen West Trail will be run from Mont Rolland to Shawbridge. It is ideal for a Goofer Trip, as it is short and sweet. There will be a little bushwacking, but it won't be enough to hold you back. Good views of the surrounding country should be obtained and camera enthusiasts will be welcomed with open arms, as this department has been neglected in the past and the better snaps may be put in the Annual.

The tapers will leave Mont Rolland at 11 o'clock, so take the 8.30 from Windsor or 9.15 from Park Avenue. Lots of men (and women) have signified their intention of coming, so why not come along yourself and have some fun? Jack-rabbit Johannsen will be with us as usual so that there is no fear of being marooned out in the cold, cold woods for the night. Organize a group and let's go North!

This rink was designed by the Students' Executive Council for the benefit of the students, and only the co-operation of the students can make it a successful project. It is an innovation on the campus and the committee is anxious to observe how it will be received.

at the old Student Christian Movement's headquarters. It is expected that the teachers will make their appearance about the middle of next week.

Strathcona Hall is still the hub of much activity. But, instead of the usual card-playing crowd of the Pit, we find hard-working men clad in white overalls busily remodeling the "hangout." The Pit is being turned into the teachers' dining room and will be completely refurbished before they come.

The familiar common room to the right of the entrance has been divided into two separate sections. One part is being converted into a library. The other section will be used as a sitting room for the students and their friends.

The main assembly hall on the first floor, where the yearly Freshman Conversation was held, is being repainted in brown and tan. It is to be made into a large lecture room and will also be used as the main assembly hall for the students.

The S.C.M. office will hereafter be occupied by Miss Elderkin, the Warden of the School of Teachers, and Miss Mackenzie, the dietitian, will also have her office in this room.

Extensive changes to the second floor are being made too. The Conference Room and Resident Common Room have been made into lecture rooms. The smaller rooms are going to be used as offices. Even the student rooms on the upper floors have suffered a touch of reconstruction. Some new equipment and furniture is going to be brought in to be used in these rooms.

Plans for the long awaited beer party are now well under way. This is the first time that the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society have ever prepared such a visit. A member of the executive stated that this party will be very much different from the other similar parties held by the other faculties in that Medical students will not be admitted, and that the event will be successful because Arts and Science students are "sane drinkers."

Lost

A military wedge cap in the Arts Building either in room 24 or 36 (I think) or any path leading from room 24 to 36. Devoted though it may be. Also one copy of C. Smith's "Solid Geometry." The book is really useless to those who do not take the course because no one can understand it, not even C. Smith himself. Finder please leave in Bill Gentlemen's office.

Science Women's Club

Will meet in the common room R.V.C. at 5.00 p.m. Speakers will be honour students who will speak for about five minutes. Joan Anderson, 3rd year honour student in Zoology; Irene Elger, 3rd year honour student in Chemistry; Jean Harder, 3rd year honour student in Botany, and Marie-Louise De Bras, 4th year honour student in Biochemistry. Tea will be served. The next meeting will be Tuesday, Feb. 3rd.

DO WE REALLY TALK THAT WAY?

We can kick a thing around as long as the next fellow, but we're getting just a bit tired of reading about this foreign language we college and high school students are supposed to speak.

We'll admit that the younger set is responsible for more than a few of the so-called "bright little phrases," but we mix in at least an equal part of English. It's getting so you can hardly pick up a popular magazine without running into a story or an article about somebody who either can or cannot talk this stuff. Even the movies are glamorizing this new tongue and inventing additions.

For instance, around here, you don't necessarily drag a bag, mouse, or cookie, just because you are accompanied by a young lady. In conclusion, do you always muck a thrush? If the fighting gets furious, do you hang a pin on a wren?

Does it curdle you to leave a hep brawl? Are all your friends your playmates? Are all jerks drips, and does a drip going steady always become a drizzle?

Can't you dance without swinging down, or smoke without inhaling? Are all musicians hording in, all vocalists canaries, and the music always jive?

Frankly, we've never mouthed "gestanko" just because something didn't smell like the first violet. We're getting just a little fed up with the whole thing.

We're positively livid! We've got the kruds and the arrays! Those beat key-pounders just ain't on the beam.

McGill University Training Detachment Canadian Red Cross Corps

DETACHMENT ORDERS

by Mrs. T. A. C. Tyrrell, Commandant.

PART 1.

17. Parades
On Friday, January 30 at 1605 hours at the Chemistry Building.
On Wednesday, February 4 at 1945 hours at the R.V.C., Room 105. (Map reading.)
18. Uniform
(a) Fire practice clothing may be worn for the Friday parade. Uniform will be worn all day on Wednesdays until further notice.
(b) Cadets are again reminded of Section VI-37-e of Rules and Regulations... "Caps and Hats will be worn when on parade and out of doors. Also in restaurants."
19. Orderly Office Hours
Office hours for this term are from 10 to 11 daily, not 11 to 12 as previously.
20. Service
Any cadets who are considering offering their services to any section of the Red Cross Corps during the summer months should report at the orderly office within the next two weeks.

January 30, 1942.

"Wanted, to marry, young woman with four good auto tires."
"For Sale. Five almost new white side-wall tires, $490. A '39 Lincoln Zephyr will be included."

Now is that time of year when a book in the hand is worth two co-eds in the brush.

Any student who learns, in four years, how to register, should receive a degree with other requirements waived.

And a bunch of big beautiful posies to those behind this quarter system with the crowded schedule for the duration. It will make it possible for a lot of students to get a lot more education than they could have managed under the present system.

Some things about it may not be pleasant, and requirements are necessarily rigid, but just remember that this is no vacation school, and that Auburn has joined the United States in carrying on this war. With these two great powers linked, we are sure of success, but we'd better not forget the reasons for some things when we familiarize ourselves with the new regulations.

More boners, from the same "Book of Boners"...
"An octopus is a person who hopes for the best."

what to do if one is in (a) a bakery, (b) a tavern, and (c) a theatre. They're all fun. If you should be the victim of a direct hit, don't go to pieces. Just lie there still and the sanitation squad will pick you up. And if you find an unexploded bomb, pick it up and shake it. Maybe the firing pin is stuck.

—The Varsity.
